From the Director

A general message of loving and respecting one another for who and what we are is a befitting message for the times in which we live. The Seussification of Romeo and Juliet offers this very message by taking one of William Shakespeare's best-known tragedies and making it suitable for all ages through the use of comedy and "Seussy" whimsy.

Although each of the Gingerbread productions at Theatre Guild Valdosta is a unique experience, this one has been particularly amazing. Our incredible cast and crew have managed to put together a fantastic show with yet another unbelievable set in just five short weeks. Honestly, it has been a coming together of entire families.

I would be remiss if I did not mention how important it is that you are here. Your support of Gingerbread Players has helped us to continue to provide this outlet for many children. The entire process from auditioning for a role, being cast in a role, rehearsing for several weeks, and finally performing are helping these young people discover their talents and build their self-esteem. They learn to work together to create something magical, something that is theirs alone.

Thanks you for coming, and I hope you enjoy the show!
